Since early 2013, these three Vancouver Police Department officers with special assignment to the Clark County Domestic Violence Prosecution Center also known as the Domestic Violence Unit or the DVU have been the subject of at least 20 internal affairs complaints. These 3 VPD Officers, Sgt. Andrew Hamlin, Detective Sandra Aldridge and Detective Charles Ahn, are named defendants in at least three (3) law suits filed in U.S. Federal District Court of Western WA.

A mix of the following allegations have been made against these VPD officers: Harassment, retaliation, bias-based policing, warrant-less search and seizure, excessive force, false reporting, fabrication of evidence, perjured testimony, false arrest, unauthorized investigation and conduct unbecoming of a police officer.

If you, or anyone you know in Vancouver or Clark County, have been victim to the criminal-like behavior of these officers, and would like your experience included in a letter to the US Department of Justice, please send your story and/or comments in an email to citizenjustice12@gmail.com.
